

ILABB ANNUAL WORKSHOP-2015

Basic Molecular and Serologic Problem-Solving in Blood Banking

AUDIENCE: Basic-Intermediate. May be especially helpful for students, new graduates, technologists returning to blood bank, generalists, or part-time blood bank technologists.

DRY FORMAT: Participants will attend a ½-day workshop at one of the sites where lecture and case material about the selection and use of molecular and serologic techniques for problem resolution will be presented. The workshop will focus on molecular and serologic techniques for antibody identification and case studies, general problem-solving approaches and stress the importance of ensuring that clinical elements are assessed during the serologic problem-solving process. Group interaction and discussion will be highly encouraged.

ACTIVE PARTICIPATION: Participants may bring their own cases for review of practical approaches to problem solving and enlist the other participants in a discussion of those cases.
